Ceramics Open Studio provides an opportunity for individuals to explore and engage in ceramic artistry in a communal and open environment. These classes are for individuals who have taken Beginner Wheel Throwing with Cortney Moses or those who have experience with working with ceramics. During open studio sessions, students have access to shared studio space, equipment, and tools necessary for working with clay. An instructor or facilitator may be available to provide guidance, answer questions, and offer technical support as needed, but the emphasis is on self-directed learning and creative exploration. Participants have the freedom to work on their own projects, experiment with different techniques, and develop their pottery skills at their own pace.
